New Jackson Hole travel guide reveals many vacation possibilities

Everyone vacations differently in Jackson Hole. It is a land of stunning natural beauty, a wintertime skiing retreat, and a home to trendy restaurants, art galleries, shows, and shops. However, with so much to do and see, it can become overwhelming. Jackson Hole: A Comprehensive Guide to Jackson and the Grand Tetons (Channel Lake, Inc.; March 2008; $14.95), by Nina Lary, covers many diverse activities and attractions so visitors can plan their most enjoyable vacation.

With 240 pages, Jackson Hole offers honest, straightforward travel advice, alleviating the need to rely on the often-confusing abundance of local promotion. The book gives visitors a well-rounded mix of local hangouts, tourist hotspots, urban pleasures, and natural wonders. It also describes the best times to visit, transportation, annual events, and more. It even covers some of the must-see attractions in nearby Yellowstone. The book also features a full index and is organized in a clear, easy-to-use format.

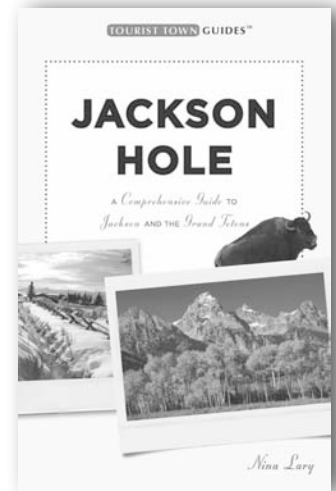

Author Nina Lary is a freelance writer based in Portland, Oregon, where she writes for local and national media on land use, culture, food and travel. Born in Iowa and raised in California, she has lived in 12 cities and small towns across the country. She first glimpsed the Rockies on a cross-country road trip that covered 10,000 miles in 30 days. It was on that trip, camping and traveling through Jackson Hole and Yellowstone that she first grasped the term “wide-open spaces.”

Jackson Hole: A Comprehensive Guide to Jackson and the Grand Tetons is distributed by Midpoint Trade Books. It is available from Ingram, Baker & Taylor, and at all fine bookstores. The retail price is $14.95. For more information, contact Midpoint or visit the website <http://www.touristtown.com>.

About the series: Tourist Town Guides™ takes you to “America’s fun places.” Discover amusement parks, roadside attractions, unique shopping, dining, resorts, and more. These specialty guidebooks will help you plan a great vacation. You’ll find no pretension here; just good, honest fun!
